Introduction

Its land teeming with natural resources, Peru sits proudly amongst the five most mega-diverse or biodiverse countries on the planet: eleven ecological regions; 84 of the 117 recognized life zones, and; numerous climates, ecological floors, and productive ecosystems.

These characteristics afford Peru the ability to grow a wide range of products all year round: plants that revitalize and energize; herbs with amazing healing or therapeutic properties, and; fruits, vegetables, and Andean grains of unbeatable quality, each with an exquisite flavor and aroma. Because of their wonderful properties and nutritional value, we call these Peruvian products superfoods.

Thanks to its exceptional natural environment, Peru's supply of products for export is varied, high in quality, and responds directly to needs and trends in the global market.

Whether fresh, frozen, or processed, our food product exports continue to increase, assisted by the numerous trade agreements we have signed to open access to millions of consumers across many markets.

In short, Peru is an inexhaustible pantry of fruits, grains, and vegetable superfoods that are good for the body and have unsurpassed taste—a land of unique delicacies we make available to the world.

The Peruvian retail offer

Peru's large retail sector is a great driver of the national economy; that is why it has a special responsibility to always stay ahead of consumer preferences.

Globally, the retail food sector is witnessing important changes in consumer demand: from packaging innovation, food connectivity, and the role of nutrition, to plant-based diets and new consumption experiences.

The world market is looking to discover new foods and tastes, and to broaden the way these are delivered; for example, products that are pre-prepared, preserved, processed, fresh, or frozen. These trends make a varied supply of foodstuffs even more important. Peru is ready and able to meet these needs.

Our products are harvested all year round, have excellent quality, boast exotic and pleasant tastes, are nutritious (especially the superfoods), and hold multiple international certifications. All these advantages currently make Peru an important and key player in the global food industry.

We align our local production—and the superfoods in particular—with new consumption and lifestyle habits. Our food products are healthy, functional, nutritious and rich in vitamins and antioxidants. They delay aging, deliver in excess of basic dietary needs, improve nutrition and physical health, and encourage healthy and responsible consumption.

Peru's retail supply offer is not just varied, innovative, and reliable; it also meets the rigors and demands of the international market. This means quality, diversity, safety, traceability, well-being, and sustainability. We comply with international agricultural best practices, maximizing the special qualities of each fruit, herb, grain, or vegetable, without damaging the environment. Then we go further, by adding values of which the country can be proud, through pursuing fair trade, promoting sustainability, and including producer communities in the export chain.

We are ready for new agribusiness opportunities in the most demanding markets.

Objective of this publication

This publication puts Peru's supply of retail products on display. All of them meet the rigors and demands of the international market, and ensure quality, diversity, safety, traceability, well-being, and sustainability.

We present, as specialized information, a reliable database with the contact details of certified Peruvian companies. These businesses are experienced exporters with a presence in international markets. The database also includes the principal food products from Peru, in the different formats, sizes, and weights that each company provides.

Our objective is to increase business opportunities by bringing together both parties: Peruvian suppliers and international buyers of retail products.

We hope that this publication will be a useful tool for rapid searches of Peru's retail supply and will generate successful agribusiness opportunities in the most demanding markets.
